Survey to Shed Light on Accounting for Software Companies

Reston, VA – February 27, 2013 –A national survey regarding accounting and financial practices and systems of software companies will shed light on best practices, trends and opportunities. The survey is sponsored by Brittenford Systems, a Reston, VA-based technology services firm.

This brief and confidential survey will examine how software companies utilize their accounting systems to manage revenue recognition guidelines, along with multi-entity reporting, financial consolidation requirements, and more. Survey participants will receive a copy of the survey results report. Survey responses are strictly anonymous. To complete the survey, link to: <https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/software-revenue-recognition-survey>.

“Little information exists on accounting best practices for software firms. This survey will likely give participants the first insight into practices and systems, including software-specific complexities like revenue recognition and other challenges,” states Shereen Mahoney, CEO of Brittenford Systems.
